

PLENARY SPEAKER
Mojca Belak, Pilgrims

Teachers, students, and total behaviour

Having at least some basic knowledge of how to deal with people is useful not only in educators' private but - more importantly - professional life, where the nature of work forces teachers to constantly manage relationships with colleagues, students, and students' parents. This interactive talk will explore one of the basic chapters of Choice Theory, which states that behaviour in itself is not a simple action, but a combination of four separate behavioural components. Analysing behaviour can help teachers understand some complicated reactions and behavioural patterns we come across daily.

About Mojca:

During the summer Mojca is a Pilgrims trainer specialising in creativity in language teaching as well as in Choice Theory. For the rest of the year she is a lecturer at the Department of English, University of Ljubljana. Working with a lot of dedicated future teachers made it possible for her to bring many of her students to IATEFL Slovenia. She is a dedicated member of 'the big IATEFL', where she is Chair of Membership and Marketing Committee. Besides in Slovenia, she has had talks, workshops and seminars in the UK, Austria, Croatia, France, Lithuania, Portugal and Serbia. She likes dancing, distance running and trees.
